WCL has inaugurated an international antitrust lecture series during which leading governmental officials, academics and practitioners will discuss antitrust policy and procedural issues in an international and comparative setting. On August 30, 2007, China enacted a comprehensive competition law. This law is likely to raise numerous procedural and substantive questions and will undoubtedly have far-reaching consequences. WCL is honored to have Professor Sheng Jiemin, Peking University, one of the participants in the drafting process, visit from Beijing to speak about the law, its likely implications and the development of enforcement mechanisms. Commenting on the law will be Yee Wah Chin, Ingram Yuzek Gainen Carroll & Bertolotti, LLP, New York who has been closely following its enactment and has lead several efforts to provide comments on the law to the Chinese Government. Professor Yanning Yu, Visiting Professor of Law from Zhejiang Gongshang University will give some remarks about the Chinese legal system and the background of the new antitrust law. The panel will be moderated by Todd Miller, Baker & Miller PLLC, who has also participated in commenting on the law during the legislative process and teaches International and Comparative Antitrust Law at WCL.

Registration is free. If CLE is required, the cost is $35. WCL is an accredited provider for Virginia, Pennsylvania and New York and accreditation can also be applied for from any other state as requested.
