

The Journal of Gender, Race & Justice

Call for Submissions

Innovative Scholarship Needed for Annual Symposium

Modern Families: Changing Families, Challenging Laws

The Journal of Gender, Race & Justice is dedicated to the living discussion of feminist inquiry and critical race analysis in legal scholarship. We explore how people are classified, stratified, ignored and singled out under the law because of race, sex, gender, economic class, ability, sexual identity and the multitude of labels applied to us.

The Journal will hold its annual symposium March 7-8, 2013. Titled Modern Families: Changing Families, Challenging Laws, the symposium focuses on three specific areas within family law: families of racial minorities, LGBT families, and family interactions with the criminal justice system. The Journal would like to invite legal authors of all perspectives to submit proposals for articles for the symposium to fill Volume 17 of our publication.

For more information about the Journal and our submission policy, please see: <http://blogs.law.uiowa.edu/jgrj>.

Please send article or proposal submissions, along with your curriculum vitae to Iain Johnson at iain-johnson@uiowa.edu.

Submission Deadline is November 30, 2012