

The Geneva Papers on Risk and Insurance Call for papers

The Geneva Association is pleased to announce a special July 2023 issue of The Geneva Papers on Risk and Insurance – Issues and Practice on

Emerging risks and liability insurance in the time of pandemics

We encourage you to submit contributions related to the following areas:

- Functions, merits and challenges of liability insurance when dealing with pandemic situations
- Trends in emerging risks and the implications for liability insurance
- Employers' liability, workers' compensation and medical malpractice insurance in the time of pandemics
- The use of new information technologies in liability insurance product development
- Analysis of the need to adapt traditional liability insurance schemes to deal with artificial intelligence
- Financials risks and liability insurance
- The role of liability insurance in incentivizing corporate investments in loss prevention to face emerging risks

Suggestions for other topics will be considered by the editors.

All contributions will go through a peer review process. The guest editors for this special issue are Prof. Ina Ebert (Munich Re), Prof. Michael Faure (University of Maastricht) and Prof. Ernst Karner (University of Vienna and ECTIL). Papers should be submitted electronically via the website of The Geneva Papers (<https://www.editorialmanager.com/gpri/default.aspx>) by 10 June 2022 at the latest.

Articles should be no longer than 8,000 words. For further information on The Geneva Papers, visit <http://www.palgrave-journals.com/gpp/>.

For further information on this special issue, please contact Hannah Dean at hannah_dean@genevaassociation.org.