The 24th Cambridge International Symposium on Economic Crime

THE PRICE OF CRIME - The Identification and Control of Risks Associated with the Enterprise of Crime and Terror

The annual Cambridge International Symposium on Economic Crime is now in its twenty-fourth year. It is a truly unique event which over the years has made an unrivalled contribution in promoting understanding of the real issues involved in successfully preventing and controlling economically motivated serious crime and thereby promotes and facilitates meaningful international co-operation. The Cambridge Symposium brings together, in one of the oldest medieval Colleges of the University of Cambridge, ministers, legislators, senior officials, diplomats, judges, regulators, law enforcement, intelligence and security officers, financial intermediaries, bankers, professional advisers, compliance and risk officers and scholars from around the world. It regularly attracts over 900 participants from 80 or so different countries – many of whom return year after year.

The Organising Committee of the Symposium gives careful consideration, after consultation with governmental and other agencies, to the crafting of each programme. The Twenty-Fourth Symposium will focus on ‘The Price of Crime’ and in particular seek to identify the risks presented to the business world and our economies by the enterprise of serious crime and terror. The main programme will examine a host of practical issues relevant to identifying and controlling the risk of serious crime and terrorist activity undermining business and the exposure of those responsible for protecting other people’s wealth to new and often unappreciated legal and regulatory risks. The main programme is supported by a number of specialist workshops which will deal with very real and practical issues of concern to all those who have a responsibility to protect the integrity and reputation of their business or economy. The breadth and depth of the symposium can only be properly appreciated by examining the programme and considering the calibre of speakers and panellists. As an international forum it is unrivalled in its level of expertise and practical knowledge.

The Symposium is able to draw upon a unique network of recognised experts from around the world. Well over two hundred speakers and panellists will address a wide range of issues of special relevance to those concerned with the prevention and control of serious crime and in particular the funding of criminal organisations and the laundering of the proceeds of crime. A glance at the programme will clearly manifest not only the level of support that the annual Cambridge Symposium receives from the world’s leading agencies, but also the practical orientation of the deliberations. Through the forum and workshops those attending the programme are able to contribute themselves to the discussion of issues of particular concern to them. There is also, and perhaps most importantly, considerable opportunity for meeting and engaging colleagues in conversation at meals in the medieval halls of the College and during many other social occasions. The opportunities for establishing new contacts and renewing old friendships are second to none.

The Cambridge Symposium is not and has never been merely a conference! It is organised on a non-profit making basis by some of the world’s most respected academic and research institutions with the active involvement and support of many governmental and inter-governmental organisations. It was first established some twenty four years ago, to promote meaningful international co-operation in the fight against serious economic crime and its record is its best testament! Successive symposia have made a real contribution – at all levels to promoting stability, good governance and the control of criminal activity. Those who are concerned to protect and promote the integrity and security of their national economy, enterprise or institution – or who are concerned to better appreciate and manage the risks facing business today, cannot afford to miss this very special event.

The above programme is confirmed subject to where the contrary is indicated by an asterisk. Inevitably given the number of speakers and panellists there will be changes and a fully updated programme will be available on the website, www.crimesymposium.org

Workshops

Participation in the non-plenary workshops will be restricted so as to facilitate informal discussion. Registration for workshops will be on a first come basis. The convenors for each workshop are indicated in the programme, but discussion will be open to all those participating.

Jesus College, Cambridge

Jesus College was founded as a college, in the University of Cambridge in 1496 by Bishop Alcock of Ely. The history of the College is, however, rather more ancient. An order of nuns occupied the site and buildings for at least two hundred and fifty years before this. Since the inception of the annual Cambridge Symposium, twenty-four years ago, the Master and Fellows of the College have been pleased to host the event and the College administers all financial matters pertaining to the programme.
